

I support Sinclair Broadcasting's right to air the Kerry documentary, and here is why. CBS, NBC, and ABC all report the news from a liberal slant. Conservatives have had to put up with this for years. The way the three major outlets report the news quite often shapes public opinion and can shape elections. Consumers deserve the truth without any slant, but in order to find it we have to search for it ourselves; we can't rely on our journalists to be 'fair and objective'. It is clear that we cannot count on mainstream media to give us both sides of a story, and conservatives are having to come up with new ways to have our side heard, too. If you doubt this, look at the archives of 60 Minutes this past year, and count the number of liberal books that have been featured on their show and then count the number of conservative books that have aired. As soon as the mainstream press is willing to hire more conservatives so that their newsrooms represent a 50/50 balance, I don't think there is room for complaining about Sinclair Broadcasting.
